Evaluate your list of core values, those which you place the most importance in, and ask yourself if they line up with God's word and His values. If there are any that God would not agree with, pray about them and ask for a renewing of your heart to be more like His. Rather than asking God to change you, ask to become who you were created to be.

Identifying which mountain/s you are called to based on the vision God has placed in your heart will also help in completing the picture of who and where you are called to be. Once you establish your vision and mission statements, you can then focus on which mountain you are to operate in; bringing back Godly influence. For example, if I choose I will fund clean water building projects in Africa through Christian Outreach programs who spread the love of Jesus as my vision statement, I would be called to operate in the business mountain, or "Speak up for those who cannot speak for themselves, for the rights of all who are destitute." Proverbs 31:8 I would be called to restoring the family mountain, as well as possibly the education and religion mountains, depending on what actions the Lord has my mission statement reflect. By clearly focusing on our mountain, we further understand the importance of our vision and mission, solidifying and cementing our resolve in executing with excellence; ascending to the place of leadership, influence and dominion to which we have been called.

Before constructing your own vision and mission statements, let us revisit what is special about you, in order to form a more complete picture to aid in your statement creations. (Your answers from pgs. 14, 25, 26 and 76)
