

When crafting your mission statement, pray for revelation, become acutely aware of your values, revisit your gifts, talents and strengths, and embrace your passions. All of these aspects play an important role in developing your mission statement. Leaving one area out creates an incomplete picture of who you are and what God has designed you to become; leaving behind some of the greatness which is already in you.

Some examples of mission statements:

To be a wise and inspiring teacher to the young future leaders of the world at a local High School.

"To serve as a leader, live a balanced life, and apply ethical principles to make a significant difference." Denise Morrison, CEO of Campbell Soup Company

"To be a teacher. And to be known inspiring my students to be more than they thought they could be." Oprah Winfrey

My mission statement:

Is it short, to the point and easily remembered? If not, revise until it is. To make sure that your statement is not too general, such as, "I will feed the hungry," envision what specific actions you will do in order to carry out "feed the hungry". A better statement would be, "Creating accessible community gardens in low income housing areas."
