Retinal vein occlusion and echolucent carotid plaque: a potential link. The association between central retinal artery occlusion (CRAO) and transient ischemic attack (TIA) has been suggested in the literature. Although the pathogenesis of this association remains unknown, it may be related to the presence of a carotid plaque causing carotid artery stenosis. We present a case with VA 20/100 and ophthalmoscopic findings of CRAO and TIA that was observed following panarteritis nodosa (PAN). When PAN was diagnosed, an echolucent carotid plaque (6 x 6 x 3 mm) in the left carotid artery was found. Optic nerve edema and fluorescein angiogram findings suggested CRAO. Although this patient experienced one TIA, subsequent systemic PAN was not observed. Further investigation is warranted to clarify the relationship between CRAO and echolucent carotid plaque.

Q: Why is $\sum_{m, n \in \mathbb{Z}} \frac{1}{m^2+n^2} = \pi^2$? Every function $f : \mathbb{R} \rightarrow \mathbb{R}$ can be expressed as $f(x) = \frac{1}{2} \int_{-\infty}^{\infty} \frac{1}{t^2+x^2} dt$, $\forall x \in \mathbb{R}$, an integration being understood in the sense of Lebesgue (so that it is a Riemann integral, in the sense of the definition of the usual set-theoretical integral). It is fairly easy to see that $f(x) = \pi$ if $x \in \mathbb{R} \setminus \{0\}$, proving part (a) in the title of the question. My question is: why does the following equal π^2 ? $\sum_{m, n \in \mathbb{Z}} \frac{1}{m^2+n^2} = \pi^2$. $\tag{*}$

The issue appears to be that the right-hand side is a finite sum, while the left-hand side is an infinite one. I would have thought that,

The influence of skilled nurses on mental health care practice: a survey of nurses in an acute psychiatric ward. Preliminary research examining the characteristics of successful mental health care teams shows that all members need to have a leadership role. Since nurses are often at the core of these teams, they are in a unique position to lead others, and their own practices are expected to model the work of the unit. This study examined the extent to which the actual practices of nurses in an acute psychiatric ward reflect the positive organizational influence hypothesized to be occurring. An overall positive organizational impact was found, but there were significant associations between the degree of positive organizational influence and (a) the working relationship of the primary nurse ($R = 0.22$, $p < 0.05$), (b) the working relationship of the ward's head ($R = 0.21$, $p < 0.05$), and (c) the influence of consultants ($R = 0.25$, $p < 0.05$). This last association also accounted for 36.5% of the variance in the organization model.

The Martini Paper Company The Martini Paper Company was an English company involved in the paper and cardboard manufacturing sector of the papermaking process. History

The company was formed in 1867 by H.G. Walker, M.D. Walker, J.T.T. Walker and John Wentworth. H.G. Walker was the manager of the business. The company was based at Weymouth in Dorset. The partners Walker Brothers also had interests in paper mills in Stanthorpe and elsewhere. The company was registered with Companies House on 1 February 1867 as 'The Martini Paper Company' and listed at no. 233340. The business expanded after World War II with the advent of the disposable paper plate, and established a new mill in Grimsby in the 1970s and a small mill at Manaton, near Cleethorpes on the east coast of England. The three remaining mills were sold to the Rexam company in 2000 for £14 million. Rexam was acquired in 2005 by Lafarge. The company is not to be confused with the Independent British Newspapers paper and cardboard company of the same name.
