A 75-year-old man presented with acute appendicitis and was diagnosed as having malignant melanoma metastatic to the appendix. The gamma camera itself does not require a cyclotron and radioactive source; the latter is necessary for a SPECT camera. Although fluid metabolism is of minimal importance for some tracers such as glucose, water, and glucose ([@bib1]), brain metabolism in humans is affected by an acute increase in blood pressure, possibly causing enlargement of blood vessels and hyperaemia ([@bib11]). Hyperaemic flow and extravascular space may lead to an increase in metabolic activity and to an overestimation of FDG metabolism. Therefore, the use of a pressure-alleviating procedure such as the administration of nitroglycerine or bed rest was suggested to prevent this phenomenon. However, in a pilot study, nitroglycerine significantly increased FDG uptake in the liver, lung, and spleen ([@bib2]). To circumvent this problem, simulated air-drying is often used 3e33713323
