The fighting marks the worst bloodshed since the beginning of the armed rebellion. The rebels, who want to join Russia, stormed the strategic rail hub of Krasnoarmeisk on Monday, say it is their last major stronghold in the country. The Kiev government says some of its military hardware is also trapped at Krasnoarmeisk and that the highway from the regional capital Donetsk has also been cut off. Local authorities say around 18,000 people live in the town's surrounding villages. The UN has said that some may have fled to government-controlled areas. Speaking at a news conference in Moscow, President Vladimir Putin denounced the rebels' actions and accused Kiev of supporting them. "Ukraine's leadership has turned a blind eye to the reckless actions of radicals in the east," he said. "It has actively supported them and continues to do so." Ukrainian President Petro Poroshenko said the rebels were using citizens as human shields. "Dozens of civilians have been killed and many more wounded as a result of attacks by the Ukrainian army on civilian centers and residential areas," he said. "This is inhumane." Poroshenko's office says 6,000 Ukrainian troops have been killed since the conflict began. Al Jazeera's David Chater, reporting from the the region, said the separatists are "thrashing" Kiev with regular artillery bombardments. "It's almost as though they want to goad Kiev into a full-scale assault," he said. Charter A spokesman for the rebels told Al Jazeera that the blockade on the Krasnoarmeisk-Krymsk highway was their way of "guaranteeing our own people's security" and would only be lifted after Kiev met certain demands. The rebels' spokesman named those demands as being that there should be no more military conflict in the country, that all weapons in the government-controlled areas are handed over to them and that all prisoners released by the Ukrainian government in the past six months are returned to jail. "A rebellion was declared as a civil war," he told Al Jazeera. Russia and the West have accused the rebels of being financed, trained and armed by Moscow. The
