Riku Lempiäinen is a 30-something drifting through life with his best friend Harri. After his eccentric family moves to Helsinki they take up a new apartment. The house happens to be in the middle of an abandoned asylum, aka the Blankspace. They are forced to live together for the sake of their sanity and sanity alone. The apartment looks completely normal on the outside, but the inside is full of secret rooms, lockers, terrifying sounds, decrepit asylum devices, and many more Blanks. Riku and Harri decide to break out. Their adventure starts when they stumble upon the basement of the asylum where hundreds of Blanks die mysteriously. The basement is also full of their belongings, a bunch of secret passageways and doorways and bizarre machines that nobody knows the purpose of. The mysteries and horror start to unravel as the duo learn more and more about what's happening in the asylum. The soundtrack is 10 minutes of carefully crafted electronic tracks. They are made for your rhythmic pleasure and make the mood more ominous. The music is definitely funky, has an ambient feel to it and sounds mysterious. What is underground? Who made it that way? Is it the Blanks that live there? Key Features: Play as two roommates - Riku and Harri, who are forced to live together and investigate what's happening inside their new house in the basement. Challenging gameplay - Sequences play in any order and at any time. Use your brain instead of a timer. What's new in Sword Slinger:

Sword Slinger (real name Hugo-Paul Schmid) is a Swiss folk and national folk rock band, founded in 1984 by singer-songwriter Hugo-Paul Schmid. They continue to create music and are still recording and performing. History As Hugo-Paul Schmid, "Schmid" being short for "Schmied", meaning an independent artisan or armorer. He met at school friend Robert Lechleiter who became keyboardist and accordionist. Just minutes after they had met, they decided to play together and started a vocal duo. They dropped the male/female aspect and became a duo. Based on this, he started a group, called Grawespieler, which means "Guardman", i.e. official association of the German guard, in 1984. The band consisted of a singer-songwriter and accordionist, an electric guitarist and a drummer. To avoid confusion, Schmid declared, that the band would be a duo. Just before the concert at the "Grocken" (i.e. "Phoenix") in autumn 1984, the band Grawespieler ceased to exist and Schmid started his solo career, he himself already becoming the bandleader and playing music on his own accordion. In autumn 1984, he had his first concerts with his own songs, laid his songs more clearly into his hands and began to devote himself more to painting. This touring activity was for a long time his main source of revenue. In May 1985, he played the "Hochturm" (i.e. "high tower" as a stage-name), a big venue in Luzern, SWITZERLAND. He met up with his old schoolfriend, who helps him now and again on producing a demo-CD. The band now had of 6 a bass guitar, an acoustic guitar, a violin and an accordion. The first press-sheet showed Hugo-Paul Schmid at the cover alongside the flag of SWITZERLAND. The first single of the band was „SCHWEBE ANDE“, followed immediately by their first album, the extended live-CD "SCHWEBE MÄNNER" (i.e. "Boatsmen" in High German), which contains the youngest songs of the group. At that time, the netherlands project "SEAGULLS" with band and painter Louis de Tombe were forming,
